

1957 SERIES I LAND ROVER EXPORT RHD ROLLING CHASSIS PROJECT

This 1957 Land Rover Series I is a promising restoration project with much of the hard work already completed. Originally an abandoned rolling chassis sourced from a Land Rover garage in New Zealand, where it had previously underwent significant progress.

Work completed includes:

- New chassis and bulkhead fitted
- Bodywork in good condition, painted in original blue with sections of bare aluminium
- Reconditioned Series IIa 2.25 engine with new pipework and radiator panel. A spare engine is included.
- Restored gearbox included, along with a period-correct spare gearbox
- New windscreen wiper motors
- Four rims with new period-correct tires
- Original roof and steering wheel included

OVERVIEW

All-around glass, excluding the windscreen need to be sourced. While the original roof is included, the rear passenger doors and rear door will also need to be obtained.

Remaining works include the full installation of a new interior, with seating and soundproofing.

Here's a rare chance to complete a classic Land Rover rebuild with your own vision. This Series I 107 - Station Wagon is well on its way to a full restoration, making it the perfect project for someone looking to finish a quality build to their own specifications.

The heavy lifting has already been done - a reconditioned engine, extensive chassis and bulkhead work, and a restoration started using only quality components. With the majority of key elements in place, what remains is the satisfying work of bringing it all together.

Whether you're an enthusiast looking for a rewarding project or a collector aiming to create a standout example, this Land Rover offers the ideal foundation.
