1955 SERIES I LAND ROVER COLLECTOR'S DREAM - COMPLETELY ORIGINAL

This 107-inch is a clean, straight, true survivor, retaining its original engine, interior, paintwork, and standard truck cab and pickup load bed configuration.

Found through a small ad in a New Zealand newspaper, this 1955 107-inch Pick-up spent its early life working on a remote sheep station. Assembled in Australia as a CKD (Complete Knocked Down) kit and brought into New Zealand, it carries with it the stories, spirit and hard-earned character of rural New Zealand.

The engine bay remains in highly original condition, housing the original 1997cc four-cylinder petrol engine. It is paired with a dog clutch system enabling selectable two-wheel drive for improved fuel efficiency and is equipped with a Birmingham-built Serck radiator, as originally specified.

OVERVIEW

Showing the patina of 67 years of use, with light scuffs on the rear tailgate, this Series I is a true testament to the benefits of careful dry storage, remaining in excellent survivor condition. The spare wheel is mounted on the rear of the cab within the load bed, while the original bonnet mountings are still intact.

The paintwork is finished in Dove Grey, one of only four colours offered by Land Rover in 1955, complemented by dark grey wheel rims fitted with period-correct Firestone tyres. All lights intact and functional, except for two Lucas style indicator lenses.

The cab remains largely original, with its three spade seat frames intact and a period-correct, three-spoke banjo-style wheel with cover. Sparse and functional, the minimalist dashboard with Jaeger gauges and plain design reflect its rugged, utilitarian purpose.

This is a truly honest 107-inch Land Rover Series I pickup - a genuine survivor. The cleanest and most original example, it would make a characterful addition to any collection for daily driving or weekend adventures.
